

Finding Inspiration: Micro Bezels Make For a Subtle Statement

While Stuller provides an abundance of finished jewelry that our customers are able to customize to suit their needs, we also notice a number of artisans using our products to create something entirely their own. We are inspired by their creativity and passion. It is this creativity and passion that pushed us to start this monthly campaign called Finding Inspiration.

Finding Inspiration seeks to inspire the inner designer in every jeweler. Our goal is to provide a behind-the-scenes look at the product we develop as well as showcase practical applications for using Stuller findings to build your own unique brand of finished jewelry. We have seen our customers do amazing things with findings and it's this creativity that we hope to promote.

A Dazzling Earring Dangle Combo

This month, we're featuring a stunning earring top and dangle that our team assembled to create a fun, articulated, finished earring. What works so well about this piece is that it caters to a couple of notable trends we've seen this year. First, "micro" jewelry is very much trending, especially among the younger generation, since these items are perfect for everyday wear. Second, earring stacks are a huge trend as people are wanting to express themselves more through jewelry.

Layered looks continue to be at the forefront of relevant jewelry trends and our 'micro' components collection is perfect for leveraging into price-point friendly statement earrings. Use findings to engage your customer in the design process; show them ways to mix and match components and loose stones to create something exceptional and meaningful.

This finished look combines components in a design that is both unique and economical. You can recreate this look using a tapered baguette earring top (2000806) and a straight baguette dangle (2000460).

Make It Your Own

The style we created was set with natural diamonds, however, you can make this look your own with any of our vast selection of stones. Add a splash of color with blue topaz or tourmaline to create a fashion statement. We make it super easy to modify the stones used in these pieces on Stuller.com. Not only are there numerous opportunities with adjusting the stones in this design, but you could also experiment with different shapes to further customize this piece. Just in time for the holidays, we have selected a curated assortment of our best-selling micro bezel components for you to craft your own on-trend style.
