

OSCARS 2018 Jewelry Trends to Own This Season

On March 4th, the 90th Academy Awards ceremony aired on ABC from the Dolby Theatre in Hollywood. The show, hosted by Jimmy Kimmel, focused heavily on gender equality and the #TimesUp movement – much like the Golden Globes and GRAMMYS earlier this year. And how about that incredible stage design featuring over 45 million Swarovski crystals? See details about how the shimmering set was engineered in the video below.

As usual, the fashion was on-point this year, bringing forth a few front-running OSCARS 2018 jewelry trends. Hollywood's brightest stars shined in red, white, and blush this year on the red carpet. From Meryl Streep to Allison Janney to Armie Hammer, red was the most radical color at the OSCARS. We saw tons of white wearers like Jane Fonda, Mary J Blige, Margo Robbie, and Timothée Chalamet. And there was a spectrum of pink, from Gina Rodriguez's soft rose sequined dress to Viola Davis' hot pink gown to Ashley Judd's Ultra Violet dress which epitomized Pantone's 2018 Color of the Year.

As expected, the OSCARS jewelry did not disappoint, with platinum-set diamonds topping the night's trends. Dramatic drop earrings were seen far and wide throughout the event, along with the big three gemstones. Watches made quite a splash this year too, with men wielding big brands like IWC Schaffhausen and Montblanc. Rolex, a proud sponsor of the OSCARS, even aired an inspiring commercial to celebrate the art of storytelling.
